CHAPTER I

Introduction

Currently, a major concern of the U.S. Air Force is the relatively low reenlistment rates of experienced Air Force personnel. For example, the Air Force is faced with manpower shortages in AFSCs such as Weather Observers, Air Traffic Controllers, Missile Systems Analysts, and Avionic Communications Specialists. During the last two decades, the Air Force has instituted several "people programs" which are designed to encourage reenlistment of trained first term, second term, and career airmen. Basically, these programs allow experienced airmen to have some input in choosing the location or length of tour of their future assignments. In deciding to what extent these programs should be continued or expanded, one of several criteria upon which the Air Force must evaluate the effectiveness of the "people programs" is to determine the impact of "People Programs" on retention rates. Of particular concern are such programs as Base of Preference (BOP) assignments, Joint Assignment of Married Couples (Join Spouse), Voluntary Stabilized Base Assignment Program (VSBAP), and the CONUS Assignment SWAP Program, among others.

The primary purpose of this project is to provide an evaluation of the impact of the "people programs" on retention. In particular, we examine both theoretically and empirically the impact of assignment policy on the retention of first-termers, second-termers and career airman for the years 1974 to 1980. This time series analysis is undertaken at an individual level, though some aggregate statistics are considered. At the individual level a probit specification will be used to carry out the analysis. This analysis will allow the Air Force to determine not only the impact of the "people programs" on reenlistment rates, but also if the cost of implementing these programs will be offset by the benefits which, to a large extent, consist of the savings in training costs of new personnel.
